Teaching: A Journey

In India, September 5th is designated as 'Teachers Day' in honour of Dr. Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, the respected philosopher, educator, and statesman. For aeons, India has been known for its legendary reverence and admiration for teachers. However, the issues that modern-day teachers face can be both exciting and overwhelming.

'Schools turning into theatres of violence, teachers feel terrorized,' read one recent headline. During a discussion with instructors and students at a Bengaluru school, one teacher stated, "I am afraid to correct some children because they might even harm us after school hours." Another expressed worry, stating that when pupils underperform, the finger is pointed at the school administration, but taking disciplinary actions in schools is frowned upon.

According to Dr. Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan's educational philosophy, moral principles should be instilled through real-life and living examples. Don Bosco's preventive system of education is built on three pillars: reason, faith, and loving-kindness. Let us aspire to be educators who accompany the young with an exemplary life, unfailing kindness, unconditional love, and devotion as we reach out to children and youth in challenging situations.
